Sink the snail guard approx. 8 - 10 cm into the soil. For best results, prepare and prick the soil with a spade. To achieve the desired length, elements can be joined - they may gape at the bottom when inserted into the soil. Should this be the case, the elements can be joined and fixed at the bottom with adhesive tape.

Be aware that unhatched snails may be hidden in the soil behind the guard. Half-filled containers with beer dug into the soil with approx. 2 cm rim sticking out in the evening hours do the trick. Leave them over night and “harvest” the juvenile snails in the morning. Bury one container per square metre.
